Rich:

Thanks for your response. Please answer the following questions.

When does public comment period on draft report end?

How long after the end of the comment period will it take before EPA completes final report?

How long is peer review process of draft report expected to take?

Will the EPA wait for the completion of the peer review process on the draft report before issue the final report?

Which agency, EPA or USGS will take the lead in releasing results of tests taken in Pavillion in April?

Will the USGS & EPA issue separate reports of their findings or a joint report?

What, if any, is the involvement of the state DEQ in these studies?

Of the Indian tribes?

I'd appreciate it if you could respond to this inquiry as soon as possible today. Thanks!

Jim

Jim-- let me know what you need re: Pavillion. EPA expects to have new data from Pavillion area wells available on our web site sometime this fall. No date set yet. As you likely know, we are still in the midst of a public comment period focused on our draft report. We expect an independent peer review process focused on the draft report and data collected by EPA and USGS this summer to begin within the next few months.
